

COLLEGE STUDENTS ADVISED BY SWIFT OFFICIAL MONDAY

"Keep yourself underpaid," was the slogan A. H. Carver, of the Industrial Relations department of Swift and Co., offered to Antioch College students in an address before the assembly Monday. "By that I don't mean that you must go and ask the boss to reduce your salary. I mean—be worth more than you are paid for, do more than just what your job calls for."

In discussing the opportunities of the college man in industry, Mr. Carver, who was superintendent of schools in Lexington, Mass., before he became associated with Swift's said that he believed that in spite of the present tendency to become pessimistic, there is cause for optimism concerning the openings for college men in business today. In the first place, the attitude of the business executive toward the college man is changing.

"Ten or fifteen years ago," Mr. Carver told his audience, "the business man often felt like that prominent executive who told his associates at a conference, 'No, I don't want any more college men. The college man doesn't know what to do, doesn't know how to do it when you tell him, doesn't want to work anyhow, the only thing he is interested in is his salary, and he isn't satisfied with that.' Today, however, conditions are changing. The complexity of modern business is offering problems that demand trained minds to meet them, and to find those trained minds now, one must go to the schools. Colleges are drawing more and more young people, and if business is to get the same caliber of young man that it did thirty years ago, when colleges trained mostly for the professions, it must go after the college man. In the year 1928, I am told, there were as many young men and women registered as students in our colleges as the entire number of men and women who had graduated from our American institutions of higher learning up to that time. If that is true business must accept the college man whether it wants to or not."

"Another reason for the changing attitude of the business man," he went on, "is found in the change of outlook of the college man himself. I believe that he never was as bad as he was painted; he was charged with not having his feet on the ground, and not wanting to work hard; with having altogether wrong ideas of what he was worth in salary, and so forth. But I can say that in my own experience with men we have employed from over a hundred colleges in the last ten years, the college man in general does not have those faults today. He is much more level-headed than he was ten years ago. And I think he is gaining more respect for the non-college man. You at Antioch have advantages that those in the usual colleges don't have—you have more contacts with industry and actuality. Those contacts have probably taught you to respect the non-college man who has been getting experience while you were getting book-knowledge, experience which is worth a great deal to him and to business."

"The college man is realizing that a business career is a lifetime job. I think he has a little better idea of what salary he is worth. His greatest weakness is in knowing what constitutes a good job. Often the dominant idea is 'in what station can I do the least and get the most?' and the tendency is to rate the job entirely on the hours of work and the beginning salary. Such an attitude, as your experience is teaching you, is usually fatal to success in the business world."

Richard Kidd, colored, Dayton, driver of a sedan which crashed into a concrete abutment on the Springfield Pike near Osborn early Monday morning, resulting in the instant death of two women and serious injury to two other colored men, was ordered released from custody Tuesday afternoon after Coroner R. L. Haines, who conducted an informal inquest into the accident, returned a verdict of accidental deaths, exonerating the driver of blame.

The crash resulted in the fatal injury of Mrs. Madeline Ball, 35, white, divorced wife of an Indianapolis, Ind., police official, and Mrs. Lucille Harris Kidd, colored, Dayton.

Kidd, driver of the machine, had been detained in the county jail here since the accident for investigation, but at the inquest, held at the jail Tuesday, authorities said the evidence failed to prove he had been intoxicated at the time of the crash.

Albert Kidd, colored, brother of the driver, and Julius White, colored, both of Dayton, also passengers in the auto, are confined in Dayton hospitals. Conditions of both remain critical. Prosecutor Marcus McCallister said that if either should recover sufficiently to give a different version of the accident, the inquiry would be reopened.

WILL DISTRIBUTE CALVES SATURDAY TO CLUB MEMBERS

Fifty-two calves will be distributed to as many boys and girls, members of the Greene County Beef Calf Club, Saturday, beginning at 9:30 a. m. at the stock yards in Xenia.

These calves are choice Hereford steers suitable for club work, and were secured by the local shipping association through the National Order Buying Co. For the past ten days these calves have been at the yards where Mr. Conklin has been caring for them, getting them on feed and past the period of danger from shipping fever, so that when they are distributed to the boys and girls they will have no difficulty.

This load of calves was obtained and financed by the local Cooperative Shipping Association. Some of the members will pay cash, but those desiring credit will give a note with suitable security, the note to be paid upon sale of the calves. Mutual insurance will be carried on all calves as it was felt this would be cheaper than carrying insurance in an old line company.

The calves will be exhibited at the county fair and a market tour held this fall. The date and place of this tour will be worked out at a later date to market the calves to the best advantage.

Any boy or girl between the ages of 10 and 21 is eligible for this project. It will be one of the regular club projects to be supervised as such. A series of county meetings on beef cattle feeding and management will be held throughout the year. The first was held January 10 with L. P. McCann, beef cattle specialist of Ohio State University, leading the discussion.

The public is invited and urged to attend the drawing Saturday, and any boy or girl interested in securing a calf is urged to communicate with this office.

ALICE AND NICK CELEBRATE

WASHINGTON, Feb. 18.—Alice Roosevelt, daughter of the President and this country's "Princess" in 1906, was back in her picture frame today.

She had re-appeared with her striking pompadour and wedding jewels, representing gifts from many European monarchs, and looked as attractive as she did twenty-five years ago when her distinguished father escorted her down the White House stairs and before a minister placed her hand in that of Nicholas Longworth.

The Longworths set the time back a quarter century just for a night—their silver wedding anniversary—and all their guests were told to wear costumes in fashion in 1906 or if these were not available, to wear shirtwaists, skirts and sailor hats.

And they did to the bewilderment of Paulina Longworth who celebrated her sixth birthday anniversary Valentines' Day.

"Princess" Alice appeared before her guests in a gown of old gold satin and wore above her pompadour a contemporary diamond tiara held in place in the back by a barrette of 1906 fashion. This gown was a part of her trousseau.

Only few of those who took part in the brilliant White House wedding twenty-five years ago were there to take part in last night's frolic but all have remarked to Mrs. Longworth how they remember her "as Princess Alice of the pompadour."

The guests recalled how "Nick" arrived "real early" for the ceremony and appeared as carefree as ever as he inspected the floral decorations and gave early arrivals a good look at his Prince Albert outfit.

Rulers and heads of governments of all over the world showered Miss Roosevelt with wedding gifts just as if she were a "real" princess.

The Republic of Cuba gave her a string of sixty-three matched pearls with diamond clasp; a dowry chest of silks, rare fabrics and ivory carvings from the empress dowager of China, tapestry, the president of France; embroideries and two silver vases, emperor of Japan; a diamond and pearl pendant, emperor of Austria; a mosaic table, the king of Italy; a mosaic from a Vatican painting, the Pope; and antique jewelry, the king of Spain and a rare bracelet from the exiled German Kaiser. The citizens of Cincinnati gave the famed newlyweds a $15,000 team of horses which have passed away.

A new assortment of gifts were on display at the home today, but this time all were made of silver.

Regular meeting of Troop No. 1, Girl Scouts, was held Tuesday afternoon at 3:45 o'clock. Officers were elected as follows at the meeting: Betty Lorimer and Virginia Kinsey, patrol leaders; Thelma Anderson and Isabelle Bowser, assistant patrol leaders; Ann Hardy, scribe; Margaret Weiss and Katherine Keller, inspectors; Virginia Babb, standard bearer. The troop is now studying signalling and members are working toward their merit badges.

JURY HEARS CHARGE AGAINST MAN WHO ELOPED WITH GIRL

John Peefer, 41, South Charleston, went on trial before a Juvenile Court jury in the Common Pleas Court room Wednesday on a charge of contributing to the delinquency of a 14-year-old Xenia high school girl, Julia Mae Elliott, whom he secretly married at Newport, Ky., last January 16.

The young bride's mother, Mrs. Reva Elliott, filed the charge, asserting her daughter and Peefer eloped and were married without her knowledge or consent. Peefer boarded at the Elliott home on Stetson Road for seven years until last October 18, since which time he has been residing in Springfield, where he has been employed as a stationary engineer.

The girl gave her age as 21 and Peefer declared his own age to be 29 when they applied for a license at Newport, according to Peefer's admission when placed on the witness stand. He declared it had been his intention to keep the wedding a secret if possible until his young wife finished her school term.

The young bride was sentenced by Juvenile Judge S. C. Wright to the Girls' Industrial School on a charge of juvenile delinquency but is being held here, pending the outcome of her 41-year-old husband's trial.

Prosecuting Attorney Marcus McCallister represents the state and Attorney Marcus Shoup is defense counsel in the trial.

BIBLE THOUGHT FOR TODAY

For we know that if our earthly house of this tabernacle were dissolved, we have a building of God, an house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens. For in this we groan, earnestly desiring to be clothed upon with our house which is from heaven.—II Corinthians, v, 1, 2.

MARRIAGE AND RANK

Should marriages take place between people who hold what is called a different rank in society? In America there are theoretically no ranks and no classes. But actually commotion is made in many circles, when some young person attempts to marry outside his own element.

This question recently came up in acute form in Sweden, where Prince Lennart, grandson of King Gustav of that country, desires to marry a young girl who is the daughter of a leading and wealthy business man. The sympathy of the Swedish people is with these young folks. But the aristocracy of the country disapproves. It argues that no Swedish prince has married a "commoner," as a person who lacks noble blood is called, for 400 years.

How about such situations in America? It is a common thing for some young man of a wealthy and socially influential family to fall in love with some girl of an obscure family without money. Many wealthy girls likewise fall in love with penniless young men. Many sons and daughters have been disinherited, and cast away as unworthy, because they persisted in such marriages.

The American people believe with all their heart and soul in democracy. They do not think that rank, class, money, or anything of that kind constitutes real worth. If the millionaire's son and the laborer's daughter truly love each other, and are equally worthy and have equal capacity for improvement, the marriage may come out well.

But if the love affair is a mere passing fancy, if there is no real congeniality or equal capacity, then the outlook is not hopeful regardless of social standing. The true basis of marriage should be love and congeniality and character and capacity, not rank of wealth.

BUSINESS OUTLOOK

The ideas of business people and of the speculative fraternity differ about the business situation. The speculators have been much discouraged for nearly a year. Recently many of them did not have any heart for speculation. They lost so heavily last year, and they saw so many of their predictions go wild, that they are not making any more. They are principally anxious now not to lose any more money.

Business people, those who are actually managing industries and are close to the pulse of trade, are more hopeful. As a rule, they feel that the worst of the business depression is already behind us.

The monthly bulletin of the National City Bank of New York expresses this point of view. It says: "The month of January has justified expectations of an improvement in the business situation. Activity in the steel and automobile industries has increased, and has been paralleled by a general broadening out of business in other important lines. Employment reports indicate a substantial expansion of payrolls in the manufacturing centers. The business situation wears a more hopeful aspect than it has for some time."

An opinion like that coming from authorities located in the heart of the nation's business, is one that counts. It is a kind of composite picture taken from reports coming in from every section of the country. When these trained observers, after their comprehensive view, say business is better, no one should doubt it. Such reports should put more heart into every business man who has been doubting the future.

The speculators may have cold feet, the natural result of unwise ventures amid the perilous uncertainties of the stock market, but people who are close to the actual working of trade, can see that business is on the up grade.

PERSONAL SIDE OF BUSINESS

Business authorities suggest many expedients by which a business or a community can increase its trade. But after all, it is personal effort and attention that pushes business the most.

A business concern may plan its operations in a systematic way, but if there is lacking some element of personal push and winsomeness, it may not get far. The power of the individual in business to push trade is something enormous. The sales clerk behind the counter who greets every customer with a smile, who tries to render useful service to each customer, who tries to make each customer a permanent friend, may not understand the theories of business, but he gets there just the same.

BEAUTY ISN'T PRETTY

Beauty is no valentine. Beauty isn't something pretty, something cute, something to decorate a wall and amuse you for a moment. Beauty's no butterfly, Beauty's no delicate sheen on the life we see around us, Beauty's quite different.

Men clutch at Beauty and run far across the world in its pursuit and hold at last in their hands what they thought was Beauty and see it fade even while they imprison it triumphantly. But it was not Beauty that they sought and lost. Beauty's not like that. Beauty's nothing so trivial, nothing so fleeting, Beauty is a far more massive thing. Then what is Beauty? I'm not sure, I'm not so confident that I can put it into words, but I can try.

Beauty may be homely, on the outside, it may be hard and lean and grim and outwardly repellent. It may be torturing, it may be agony, and it may be hard to recognize at first. But you always know Beauty at last. You find it at the center of the fragrant peach, you come upon it at the very kernel of life.

There is Beauty in a raging storm, and there's Beauty in the great rock that stands strongly against the destroying forces. There's Beauty in the man who grows as his heart is troubled and Beauty in the woman who faces grief and does not let it crush her to earth. The sleepless mother bending over her poor sick child, the patient father sticking to the task he has chosen, the little ship leaving its course to rescue a foundered crew at sea, a hurt youngster keeping his chin to himself—these are the servants of Beauty.

Beauty is not something we see and desire for ourselves. Beauty is the thing we do, the way we live. And though we may be bruised and battered by life we may find it beautiful at last and far more lovely than anything we have foolishly called Beauty. Than any of these things that were pretty to the eye or soft to the touch, but had no power at all to ease any deeper pain of living.

"QUIET" DAY AT ASTOR NEW YORK CITY, New York—Speaking of things gaudy: A fact not generally known is that in one year, at the Astor Hotel, more banquets are served than in any other single establishment on earth. Their facility in this direction is almost miraculous.

Four months ago, in twenty-four hours, from noon to noon, the following schedule was handled without a slip:

Five hundred women flittered in at 12 o'clock for a luncheon dance. At 2 p. m. the tables were down, the carpet up, the floor cleared and waxed for dancing, and a platform built for the orchestra. The women checked out at 5 p. m.

An hour later the room was renovated, re-modeled, re-set for 1,500 of "The Grand Street Boys," with Alfred E. Smith in the vanguard. At 11 p. m. it was cleared for dancing, another orchestra platform was erected and the party broke up at 4 a. m.

The houseman, carpenters and the rest kept their pace. In two hours they had the ballroom ready for the annual New York Police Department Holy Name Society breakfast. That got under way at 9 a. m., with 5,500 there, and continued until past noon.

The crews took it easy then, cleared up after the 5,500 and merely dawdled to be ready at 6 p. m. for 2,000 others at the Ninth Masonic District dinner.

—CHARLES P. STEWART—

WASHINGTON.—Senator Joseph T. Robinson's Democratic presidential prospects never were dazzling. Still he was his party's leading hope. Politicians recognized his aspirations as worth at least a modicum of consideration.

Now they are considered dubious. The senator's identification with the administration's family relief "compromise" is generally regarded as having been an exceedingly bad thing for him presidentially. He is safe until 1934 as to his senate seat. Moreover, he can argue plausibly that, in so far as his home state was concerned, he was justified in looking upon compromise as better than nothing. Indeed, his Arkansas teammate, Senator Thaddeus H. Caraway, agreed with him. Caraway, however, is not figuring on the presidency, and inflicting a presidential boom is altogether a different matter from hanging onto a seat in the senate.

To explain how Senator Robinson became involved in the compromise situation—Farmers in the drought area (notably Arkansas), as we know, for some time have been receiving government loans to feed their livestock and plant fresh crops, but to their lament that they themselves were hungry the Washington administration has answered that they must look to the Red Cross for food, since federal "doses" would tend to pauperize them.

Senator Robinson, dissenting upon this latter issue, and insisting that Red Cross aid was insufficient, was fighting for a $25,000,000 allowance from Uncle Sam to feed human beings. He fought so hard that, although it was evident he could not win outright, the outlook was that he would force an extra session of congress, which the administration was most anxious to avoid. Hence its offer of a compromise.

The compromise proposed provided for a $20,000,000 instead of a $25,000,000 allowance, with an implied promise of the use of money to buy food for humans, but no explicit statement in the legislation to that effect.

Submitted in congress, it immediately met with opposition. Senator LaFollette of Wisconsin called it a "face-saving arrangement." Senator Wheeler of Montana described it as "discreditable alike to the president and the senate." Representative Tilman B. Parks, from Senator Robinson's own state of Arkansas, termed it "a sham and a fraud." Representative Fiorello H. La Guardia, hailing from Manhattan Island, bitterly denounced it for making no allowance at all to feed the cities' unemployed, whose need, he asserted, is as dire as the farmers'.

Senator Robinson, however, agreed to it—not enthusiastically, yet he was acquiescent. It seems strange he did not realize that, as a presidential candidate, he would need urban as well as rural support, and read a warning in Representative La Guardia's words, if not in Senator LaFollette's, Senator Wheeler's and Representative Parks'.

But that was not all of it. By profession Senator Robinson is a lawyer, a member of the Little Rock firm of Robinson, House and Moses.

Among these associates' clients are the Harvey C. Couch power, railroad, banking and many other large interests in Arkansas, Louisiana and Mississippi.

Mr. Couch, himself, while not in politics, often lends himself to public movements in behalf of the section he is so active in developing. He was Arkansas food administrator during the World War, had charge of state food relief during the Mississippi valley inundation of 1927, and is chairman of drought aid in the afflicted commonwealth at present.

Having been frequently in contact with President Hoover before, it was natural for him to visit the White House in the course of the emergency of today, and if, as reported, he suggested to the president the outline of the "compromise" above referred to, there was no reason why he should not have done so. It may not be true that he did, but it is quite widely believed and certainly there is no harm in believing it.

For Robinson, House and Moses to be lawyers for the H. C. Couch power and other interests; perfectly proper for Couch to have suggested (if he did suggest) the much-discussed drought relief compromise to President Hoover—and undoubtedly Senator Robinson used nothing but his best, unbiased judgment in deciding that it was a good compromise to accept, even though his acceptance of it surprised a great many folk.

Nevertheless, politicians do link such circumstances together in so uncharitable a fashion that it makes them wonder whether the senator has not seriously injured whatever presidential chances he may have had.

Cooked Food Also Needed

—By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.—

Occasionally, even yet, a very extreme "back to nature" disciple is likely to carry his dietetic ideas to an extreme and advocate eating raw foods.

The logic used is quite stark. Wild animals and savages eat raw food. Primitive man ate raw food. Wild animals, savages and primitive man all exhibited wonderful health. Therefore, everybody should eat raw food.

We may pause a moment in this argument and remark that wild animals and savages are not superlatively healthy. Primitive man, as we learn by examining his remains, had nearly all the diseases of civilization, and a few of his own. All these classes of individuals die young and are not nearly so healthy as civilized man. So far as the raw food argument goes, however, it gains some color from our present knowledge of the accessory factors in foods.

By accessory factors I mean the vitamins and minerals. The basic essentials are the energy and tissue producers—protein, fat, carbohydrate and water—and for a long time these were considered the only essential factors. But researches of the last two or three decades have shown that the minerals and the vitamins are equally necessary.

Cooking does not destroy the values of the basic elements—protein, fat, carbohydrate. Cooking in a vessel especially if soda or other alkalinizing elements are added, does very largely destroy the vitamins. It also leaches out the minerals. The more so the longer the cooking is carried on.

But this is not an argument against a dietary of cooked food, or basis for a religion of eating only raw food. It is easily possible to add enough raw food to any meal to balance it so that all the vitamins and minerals necessary are present. In fact, any ordinarily well planned meal does this. A glass of milk, a sliced orange or other fruit, a glass of lemonade, a salad with olive oil dressing, butter, salt, tomatoes, lettuce, watercress, parsley, nuts, berries, honey—all these contain vitamins and minerals and usually appear in a raw or native state on your table.

The question of whether there is any advantage in cooking food has been the subject of recent studies made in Germany. Loewy and Behrens studied seven persons who ate only raw food. It was difficult or impossible to get them to eat enough to make up their energy requirement. The most they would take was about 1600 calories, when they really required 2500 to 3000.

Cooking, by creating pleasant odors and helping the appearance of food, increases appetite and digestion and thus promotes nutrition. Schenck and Bischoff compared the growth of experimental animals on a diet of raw and cooked meat. Better growth was observed in the animals which ate the cooked meat.

Our ancestors, primitive men, and our brothers, the wild animals, had to have some kind of adaptation which we have lost in order to live on raw foods.

Let Husband Have Choice

—By MRS. VIRGINIA LEE—

"DEAR VIRGINIA LEE: I have been married for seven years. Have one child six years old. My husband is good to me. He is the boss. I can't have any say but must do what he says. I always have worked.

"Have just found out that he has been going around with another woman for four years. He has tried to have one of his men friends bring her to our house to meet me. "He sent me away last summer for three weeks, and the woman stayed at our house while I was away. My husband has not known I have found this out. What do you think I ought to do? Should we separate or should I let him go on that way?"

HEART BROKEN "I have always felt that in like case I would give my husband his choice; but I would not be the wife of a man who was carrying on an affair with another woman. But I do not know, I might feel differently if the case were my own.

In any event I would welcome the chance to see what kind of a woman had interested my husband, and much would depend on the type of woman she was and how she acted.

If two persons are congenial and always have been happy in their married relations, I believe that, generally speaking, the husband returns to his wife, especially if there are children.

There are men who can't seem to be satisfied with a perfectly good wife. They have to have various flirtations with other women to satisfy their ego. They excuse themselves on various pretexts, but I wonder whether it isn't self-delusion that makes them feel the need of some one to love them and to continually tell them so. The wife is an old story. She has grown a bit less inclined to pet and baby them, and so their need for such demonstrations makes them easy prey for the woman who in her turn is looking for someone to love her.

No one knows, I suppose, just how much the continual longing for love and understanding plays in such an affair, and how much selfish egotism.

Has your husband become an old story to you, and do you resent his "business"? It may be he has turned to this woman who ministers to his love of flattery.

I certainly would not give up my home and husband without a fight. If you care enough you may have to play a waiting game for awhile until he tires of her and comes back to you; but faithful, constant love may win him back.

You can support yourself if you have always worked. Maybe a trial separation would be best until he decides what to do. It might not be so humiliating to you. Talk it over with him if you can bring yourself to discuss the matter, which would be best.

But, above all things, be very sure that you are right in your suspicions of your husband. Don't let gossip and ill-founded talk make you distrust him.

JUST JOANNE: I think you have made all the effort you should to make up with this boy friend of yours. I presume he has just gotten over wanting to be with you, and now he is not angry about anything special. Don't write any more notes or pay any more attention to him. Have too much pride to let him see that you are hurt. You'll feel better later when you have another boy friend.

Ear Can Be Asset To Beauty

—By GLADYS GLAD—

Ever since she appeared on the screen as Wendy in "Peter Pan," Mary Brian has been playing the part of the sweet, demure young thing in pictures. Recently, however, she was given a new role that required an appearance of sophisticated smartness. To achieve this effect a new coiffure was necessary. And the artist who designed Mary Brian's coiffure for this role transformed her from a naive lass to a chic, sophisticated woman merely by arranging her hair behind her ears and exposing these organs to full view.

It is surprising what an effect an exposed ear can have on one's appearance. Yet few women seem to realize just how much of an asset a perfect ear can be. Many a beautifully tinted, perfectly formed ear is kept concealed beneath a mass of hair by its owner.

And many an ear, with cauliflowerish tendencies, is flaunted before the public without any qualms on its possessor's part.

The earring fad is still popular among women, and if tastefully chosen, these baubles can do a great deal to enhance a woman's attractiveness. But I am not very much in favor of such ornaments, for I feel that the constant wearing of them is likely to have a detrimental effect on the ears. Regardless of what method one uses to fasten them to the ears, the wearing of them may eventually ruin the beauty of the ear lobes.

I have seen older women, whose earlobes had been dragged to an ugly length by heavy earrings, and had become wrinkled and extremely unsightly.

During the last few years screwing the ornaments onto the ears was the most popular method of fastening them. Now, however, women seem to be returning to the practice of having the earlobes pierced. They have found that when the earrings were screwed tight on the lobes of the ears they were very uncomfortable. And if they were not fastened tightly, their fair owners were in constant danger of losing them.

European royalty has never abandoned the practice of having the ears pierced. However, I think that this practice tends to destroy the natural beauty of the ears. Pierced earlobes are never attractive without earrings. And no quantity of powder will obscure the scars left by the piercing.

Oily Hair
A Reader: Lemon or vinegar rinses will help to remove the excess oil from your hair. A teaspoonful of baking soda added to the last rinse water after a shampoo will also help to make your hair fluffy.

Nose
Mac: The only way that I know of in which you may have your nose made smaller is by plastic surgery. The constant use of fast less castor oil on the lashes will not injure the eyes.

EDITOR'S NOTE: While it is impossible for Miss Glad to answer beauty questions by mail, she will be happy to send you her past articles on "The New Figure" and "Beauty Culture" if you will write her, care of this paper, enclosing self-addressed, stamped envelope, and 10 cents in coin for each, cover cost of printing and handling. No news is good news, it is said, and, if this be true, we are certainly telling the world good news in this edition of our daily column.

Just in case you don't know it, the two teams which reach the finals in the annual Greene County class B high school basketball tournament two weeks hence, will both represent this county in the sectional state tournament at Springfield March 6 and 7, competing with schools from Champaign, Clark and Logan Counties.

Three other sectional class B tournaments in the Southwestern district will be held on the same two days, teams from Darke, Miami, Montgomery and Shelby Counties competing at Dayton; teams from Brown, Clermont and Hamilton Counties playing their elimination series at Cincinnati, and schools in Butler, Clinton, Preble and Warren Counties engaging each other at Middletown.

The semi-finals for the "B" class schools, bringing together the survivors of the tournaments at Springfield, Dayton, Cincinnati and Middletown, will be staged March 13 and 14 at the Dayton coliseum, at which time the semi-finals in the "A" division will also take place to determine which teams will represent this district in the state class A and B finals at Columbus, March 20-21.

Old-time auto race fans—if there are any in these parts—should be interested in the report Barney Oldfield, aging by word of speed, may return to automobile racing with the running of the international 500-mile race at the Indianapolis motor speedway next May.

"Several of the old timers are planning to return to racing at Indianapolis this year," says Barney, "and I am in just as excellent physical condition as any of them. I certainly know how to drive. And my experience in the sport should offset any stiffness in my driving joints."

More than a year ago Oldfield began a rigid grind of physical training. Abstinence was his watchword, and so there may be something to his declaration that "I'm serious about taking a car to Indianapolis track and taking another shot at that $100,000 purse."

One reason why Barney is casting attentive eyes again to auto racing is that his fortune, the foundation of which was built in the speed sport, was practically wiped out during the stock market depressions, and it is to his first love that he looks in an attempt to recoup his lost earnings.

"I'll take a car down early and find out for myself if I have any difficulty in bending those cars around the corners," declares Oldfield. "Of course, if the rules hadn't been changed demanding the two-man cars being used to-day, I'd never make the attempt. The cars are faster than when I quit driving, but, by the same token, they are much easier to handle."

Oldfield recalls the last race in which he was a contestant. "It was in California," he asserts, "and there were heats to decide the winning drivers who were to compete in the final. When we lined up, I was at the pole, Eddie Hearne was in second position and Louis Chevrolet on the outside. Tommy Milton, then a youngster, was on the pole in the second row.

"We rolled away for a flying start and took the flag while riding at a terrific gait. Hearne and I were neck and neck. Slowly I maneuvered him to the extreme outside so that I could dive inside at the first turn. I was watching Hearne closely, paying no attention to the inside. When I had forced Hearne as far as I could, I started to cramp my wheels left for the dive into the turn. But beneath me was this young Milton who had come up on the inside. It was one of the most daring chances I had ever seen taken. I figured that if the boys were trying that hard to win races, I'd better find a new business."

Meanwhile the "young" Milton, about whom Oldfield speaks, has won the Indianapolis race twice—the only one to do it—and after grabbing about every other laurel, retired from the sport.

Bowling

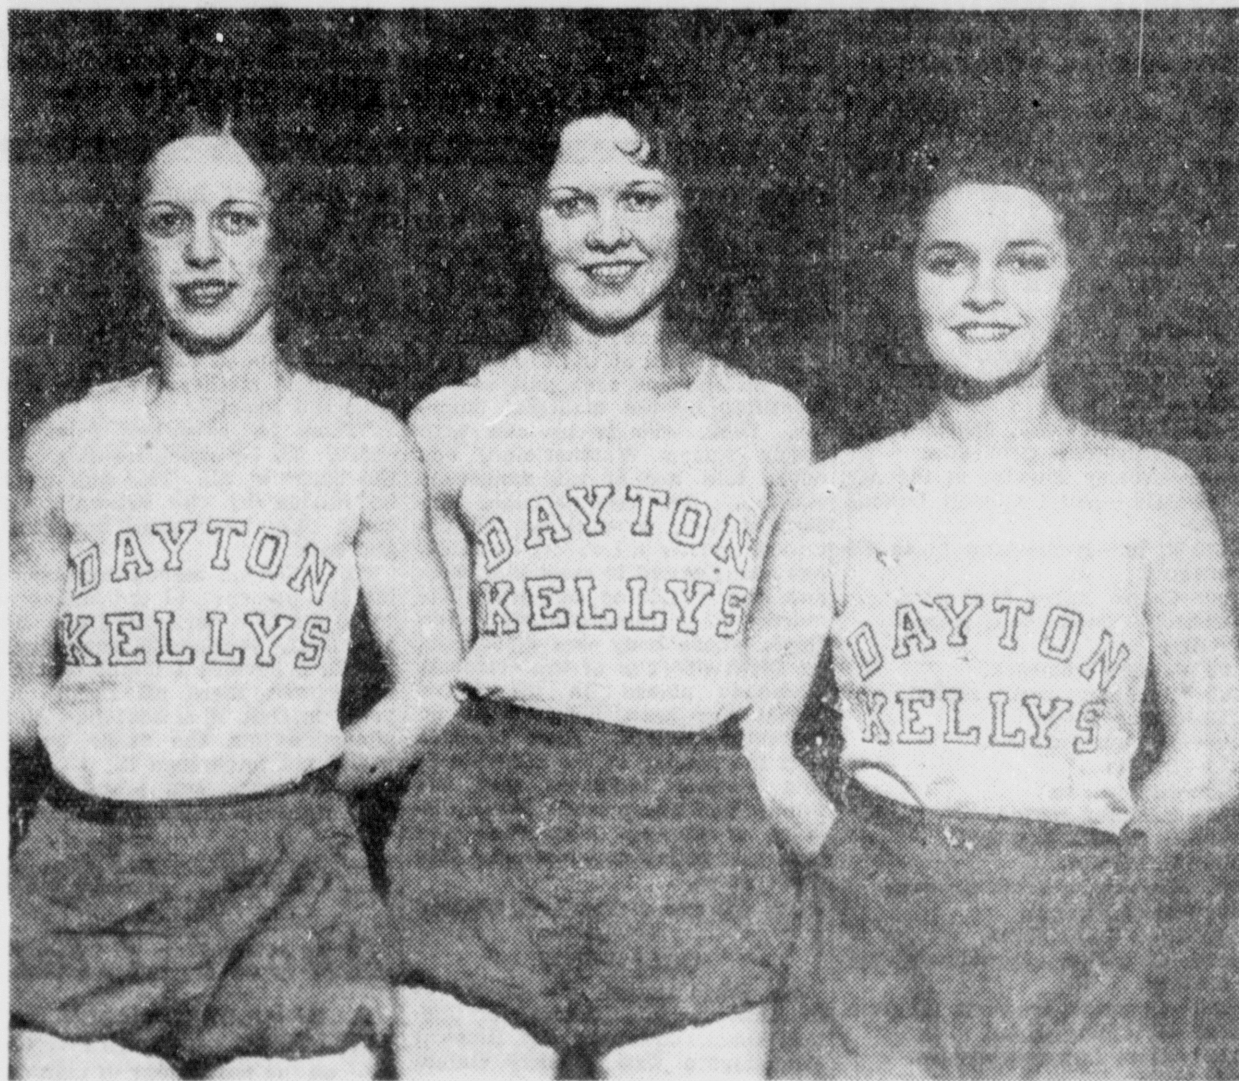

Falling shy by only eleven pins of equalling its own league record for high team total this season, the champion Greene County Lumber Co. bowling team easily made a clean sweep of the three-game series with the Xenia Shoes in a Recreation League match Tuesday night. The league leaders rolled games of 941, 976 and 951 for a three-game total of 2,868. Hollis Peterson, high average bowler in the league collected a fine series of 638, followed by "Hootie" Brickell with 602 and "Bill Morehead" with 582. Brk totalled 522 for the losers. Box score:

KOLLEENS PLAY HERE WEDNESDAY NIGHT

Schlecht, center, and Jane Ward, forward who is a new addition to the team. The Kolleens quintet defeated the Dayton Keefe-Allen girls, 29 to 18, at the coliseum last Sunday. Local fans will recall the Keefe-Allen girls appeared in Xenia recently and vanquished the crack Chicago General Office Pennsylvania five.

FALCONS SEEKING REVENGE IN GAME WITH WAPAKONETA FIVE

Revenge for an early season defeat will be sought by the Lang Chevrolet Falcons in a return game with the Alpha Reds of Wapakoneta, O., to be staged Wednesday night at Central High gymnasium.

The Wapakoneta quintet administered a decisive defeat to the Falcons a few weeks ago in a game played on its own floor and the Xenia five, beaten last week by Olson's Terrible Swedes, is thinking seriously about turning the tables on the Reds in the return engagement.

Ty Freigau, popular Dayton referee, will officiate the game.

A preliminary contest, starting at 7:30 o'clock, will bring together two of the leading feminine basketball teams in the state as the Kelly Kolleens of Dayton will meet the Alpha Reds girls' five of Wapakoneta.

The Kolleens have, without much doubt, the strongest court combination in the Gem City as local fans who have seen them play at the Dayton coliseum may agree, although there are those who believe the Kelly quintet and the Keefe-Allen girls are about on a par. The Kolleens defeated the Keefe-Allen girls, however, 29 to 18 last Sunday.

N. Y. STOCK MARKET

NEW YORK, Feb. 18.—After a short period of hesitation, the specialty stocks and utilities today resumed the advance which was blocked by yesterday's final selling wave. The bulls were aided by a favorable survey of steel trade conditions by the Iron Age, which reported better automobile buying of steel and a good expansion of orders from other important trades.

GARAGE IS ROBBED

When thieves who entered the I. F. and F. A. Stewart garage in Bowersville sometime Tuesday night went away, twelve tires and fourteen tubes worth about $80, went with them, according to a report made to the sheriff's office. The intruders gained entrance through a rear window. This garage was burglarized once before, it was learned by Sheriff John Baughn and L. A. Davis, county road patrolman, who investigated the robbery.

Health Officer, Oakland, California

...one of 56 health officials from 56 different points approving Cremo's crusade against spit or spit-tipping.

Every smoker, every wife whose husband smokes cigars, should read Dr. Emerson's letter.

"Who are the friends of 'Spit'?"

YOU MAY WELL ASK THIS QUESTION WHEN 56 IMPORTANT HEALTH OFFICIALS HAVE WRITTEN SO STRONGLY AGAINST THE EVILS OF SPIT OR SPIT-TIPPING.

Dr. Emerson writes: "Any... campaign... against the use of human sputum... protects public health."

The war against spit is a crusade of decency. Join it... Smoke Certified Cremo—a really wonderful smoke—mild—mellow—nut-sweet! Every leaf entering the clean, sunny Cremo factories is scientifically treated by methods recommended by the United States Department of Agriculture.

The American Cigar Company,

New York, New York.

Gentlemen:

What is wrong with the word "spit"? We have been spitting for years and will probably continue to spit for many years to come. It is the uncontrollable or indiscriminate spitting that does the harm, as it contains so many communicable germs.

Any type of campaign or advertising against the use of human sputum is endorsed by this Department, because it protects public health.

Very truly yours,

ROYALIST CABINET ENDS CRISIS AFTER OTHER GROUPS FAIL

Admiral Aznar probably will agree to the holding of an ordinary cortes (parliament), which would modify the constitution in some degree. The king's power will probably remain untouched, however.

PARIS, Feb. 18. — Prominent Spanish exiles and escaped revolutionists living here predicted today that a republic in Spain was inevitable and that the throne was doomed.

Any regime retaining the king as absolute or limited head will be short-lived, according to Indalecio Prieto, former Bilbao socialist deputy, and General Queipo de Llano, who with Major Ramon Franco lead the insurrectionist rebellion launched at the Madrid military airbase.

"I dare say it had," replied Dick. "As I told you, one of the men who spoke to me in the Margate Jetty was an obvious bargee. But, if you come to think of it, Herridge cannot have been taken from Wapping to Coldharbour Point in an ordinary barge. When was he last seen alive?"

"At about four o'clock," said Sir Edric. "But I don't quite follow."

"Suppose he left Wapping by water for Coldharbour Point at four. Your barge was seen alongside the wharf about high water, say five o'clock. Now, the distance by river from Wapping to Coldharbour Point is about twelve knots. That means to say that if your barge conveyed him, she must have made twelve knots against the tide, which, as Euclid says, is absurd."

"One to you, Dick," remarked Sir Edric. "I hadn't thought of that."

"I haven't finished yet. See what it is to enlist a brain! Who told your people about the barge, Conway?"

"The Warden of Rainham ranges," replied Sir Edric. "They lie a little farther down the river from the wharf."

"Then he saw her from the shore. To be exact, he didn't see the barge at all. Her hull would be hidden by the sea-wall. He could only have seen her masts and sails."

"A sufficient reason for assuming the presence of the hull, even to a stickler for exactitude like you, Dick," replied Sir Edric dryly. "Oh, I haven't a doubt that the barge was there all right. My point is that if a boat had come alongside her, the range warden would not have seen it. I believe that Herridge was brought from Wapping to the barge in a boat. Now, only a fast motor-boat could have made twelve knots against the tide.

"Even if the barge had nothing to do with it, a motor-boat must still have been employed. I don't think it possible that Herridge can have been drowned before he got to the wharf. The river is always pretty full of craft, especially about high water, and there would be considerable risk of the drowning being observed. Now, the doctor tells us that he died between four and six. Put it as the latest and say six o'clock. The twelve miles must then have been covered in two hours. That is to say the craft that conveyed him must be capable of six knots. No sailing barge could have done that,

Samuel Goldwyn is reported to be bringing Herman Shumlin, another celebrity, producer and director of the current Broadway hit, "Grand Hotel," to Hollywood.

Shumlin is said to have been the lawyer who deserted his profession to be near her, many screen fans were brokenhearted. But not so Farrell. He would have to know his interest in Miss Gaynor was purely academic while Miss Valli, was something else again. Virginia was married once before and divorced. For Farrell, it was his first venture into matrimony. Virginia was Virginia Sweeney before she entered the films. The rumor that preceded the actual marriage brought numerous protests from his fans. It is said.

Life is a hotel and we are all so many scraps on the register until it is time to move on or the bill falls due, says "Grand Hotel," translated from the German of Vicki Baum by William Drake. Drake is a Dayton boy who has made good in the big city. The audience is permitted to play peep-

Janet is going to star in a musical for Fox, and, with Charley Honeymooning in Europe, some other leading man will probably play opposite her. The picture is "Delicious" which George Gershwin and Guy Bolton have just finished writing. It will be produced in the late spring with David Butler directing.

ing Tom into the hotel rooms of various characters to see them love, dance, dream and die.

The register includes: Baron Von Gaigerp (Henry Hull, one-time leading man in stock in Dayton) who sweeps away his aristocratic ideals for want of money, steals the pearls from a dancer but falls in love with his victim and ends up as an apprehended thief with a bullet in him; Grusinskala (Eugenie Lentovich) the dancer; Kringelein (Sam Jaffe), a clerk with only a few weeks to live; Flaemmchen (Hortense Alden), a typist; Dr. Ottersschlag (Romaine Callender), an industrialist.

The romance of Virginia Valli, the "girl with the cameo features" and Charles Farrell, the young man so admired by feminine fans, has finally culminated in a midnight marriage in Yonkers, N. Y., and the start of a honeymoon to Europe.

The romance was of four-years standing, withstanding the romantic roles Farrell played opposite Janet Gaynor, which created such a sentimental appeal, that fans almost insisted on their marriage. When Janet married Lydell Peck,

WANT ROAD PLACED IN HIGHWAY SYSTEM

Petition seeking to have approximately two miles of the Xenia-Fairfield Road incorporated in the state highway system has been filed by County Commissioners with O. W. Merrill, state highway director, the application also bearing the signatures of eighteen land owners along the highway who favor the proposed extension.

The highway is gravelled and the contemplated extension would be from the junction of inter-county highways No. 525 in Bath Twp. and No. 60 in Fairfield, west for two miles, skirting Wright Air Field, to another inter-county highway.

A similar petition had previously been filed two years ago but was not favorably acted upon.

The latest application requests the highway director to hold a public hearing to determine the desirability of such an addition to the state highway system.

QUANTITY OF FOOD MISSING FROM SCHOOL

A week's supply of foodstuffs intended to form the basis of hot lunches which, during the last two or three weeks, have been served to pupils enrolled in grade classes at the old Caesar Creek Twp. high school building on the Wilmington Pike, seven miles from Xenia, mysteriously disappeared from the cellar of the building sometime during Monday night.

Hungry thieves who broke in through a cellar window carried away the entire supply, including a quantity of beans, macaroni, cheese, potatoes, prunes, corn, tomatoes, butter, salmon, crackers, lard, raisins, cocoa, eggs and sugar.

Previously the grade children had always brought their own packed lunches to school, but a few weeks ago this plan was dispensed with. A cook was employed on school days and the pupils would be served hot meals at noon at the building, making it necessary to keep a considerable supply of food on hand at the school.

The robbery was reported to the sheriff's office and was investigated by Walton Spahr, chief deputy sheriff.
